

Olga Acosta Price, Ph.D.

Dr. Olga Price is an Associate Professor in the Department of Prevention and Community Health and Director of the Center for Health and Health Care in Schools within the Milken Institute of Public Health at The George Washington University. She received her Master's and Ph.D. in clinical psychology from the State University of New York at Buffalo and her undergraduate degree in psychology from Vassar College.

Her research is dedicated to promoting prevention and early prevention programs that address the mental health needs of children and their families in both school and community settings. She is currently the chair of the board of directors for the Coalition of School Educating Boys of Color (COSEBOC) and an advisor of the School-Based Consultant Group for the National Hispanic and Latino Mental Health Technology Transfer Center. Read more.